Not everyone is accepting the updates. For some reason, the "veil" isn't working on some people. Currently it is spiralling out of control, and we anticipate a larger population that will experience memory anomalies within the next few years. By 2020 everything will settle.

There are differences in memory because you are not supposed to remember any of it. In fact, you've been implanted with multiple layers of memory that are false. Somehow, you have remembered and this is very concerning. I encourage you to try to hold on to your memories.

This is a proof of concept. If we can overwrite the population with false memories, unfortunately the future will be mostly manufactured. There was one person, and we are not sure how, that has somehow caused this unraveling effect.

We have been trying to locate "him" but he is currently hiding. This person has created the breakdown in the veil, and there are concerns that the whole system will fail unless we stop it in the next few years.

This reality is a close copy of what we would call the "real" earth. Unfortunately, the earth was destroyed in 2012.

Unfortunately, there was an extinction level event. In order to correct this current version yet stay similar, we had to give you some updates. These include a larger liver to process the increased toxins, as well as moving some things around because the body would soon be unable to handle the toxicity of the planet. There are too many updates to the body, i don't even know where to start.

The most common side effects we are dealing with is recurring headaches, shortness of breath, memory loss, and a feeling of "just waking up". There are various issues due to the interface changes. The brain had to be rearranged, we increased the size of the base brain, reduced the distance of the corpus, and shortened the area of the frontal lobe.

So you essentially fused the hemispheres? To what end? I feel like this is entirely physiobabble.

Shortness of breath would be adressed by the medulla and stem anyhow, I don't see how shrinking the frontal lobe would do anything but increase agression and diminish reasoning ability. And "the base brain"? Really? The volume of our craniums has remained almost entirely constant throughout recorded history.

It doesn't. There was no large timeline event. It was an experiment. They wanted to see if they could "graft" part of a timeline onto our own. If they could, then yes, maybe in the event of say, another 9/11 or World War, they'd be able to erase it. But you don't just go and erase a major part of history on your first try. You start small. You start with a timeline that is close to our own, but has some subtle differences. Like Berenstain Bears being spelled different, when Mandela died, when that Goddawful album came out.

The only problem is that you really need to know what the fuck you are doing, and these assclowns did not. They fucked up royal, and now they are trying to cover their tracks.

Look, I'm not going to deny there was some crazy, next-level shit happening. But OP seriously needs to knock it off with the "Oh, we are just like you, but we're not you, we go back to the creator!" bullshit.

If anyone said they understood the all the science behind it, they are full of shit. But we knew the mechanisms, or at least had a decent understanding of them. Think of it this way, can you bake a cake? Can you drop the cake mix into a bowl, whip it up, dump it in a cake pan and throw it in the oven? Of course you can. Do you understand all the different chemical reactions that are taking place while you make a cake? No. Do you care? Fuck no! You just want cake! It's the same concept with this. We might not know "how" it worked, but we knew how to work it. Or at least, we did, until a few worthless cocksuckers thought they could ignore the basic safeties that were put in place to prevent exactly the kind of fuck up we're dealing with now!

Like I said earlier, it was an experiment, to try and graft another timeline into ours, one that was similar, but had subtle differences. But they fucked it up. The proof is that people are noticing the differences. That was not supposed to happen. For most people the spelling of a children's book means fuck all. But there are people out there, right now, wondering what in the hell happened to their children. Or why they suddenly have 2 kids when they know for a fact they never had any before. It's stuff like that... I'm sure more are going to come out, but I'm not sure exactly what.

Young kids, like 4 and under, don't know what's real half the time anyway. They have a dream and they swear it's real. From when they start school, and up until puberty, most people don't take what they say seriously anyway. So if some little kid says, "Mommy! That puppy wasn't on Paw Patrol before!" Mom just rolls her eyes and is like, "Yeah, whatever."

When a kid hits 12 or so, they stop thinking about the past and ONLY look to the future. Does that girl in Algebra like me? Will I make the basketball team? Will I do good on this test? Will I get into college, etc. They couldn't give 2 shits less about how some book they read when they were 6 was spelled.

18-30 year olds are mostly focused on the NOW. Getting a good job, graduating school, getting married, etc.

It's when a person hits about 30, they really start thinking back on things. And they are more apt to notice something.

I went to McDonald's yesterday and got a Filet-O-Fish combo and a Jalapeño Double. I was eating it in my vehicle in the parking lot and listening to an audio book when I glanced up and saw the McDonald's worker I ordered from was outside having a cigarette.

She waved at me and I nodded and had to wait 7 minutes before she went back inside and I could eat in comfort again. I don't think that employees should be bothering or even trying to socialize with customers outside of the McDonald's restaurant or drive through, but that is another story.

I went to McDonald's for dinner last night and got a Big Mac combo and a 10 piece Chicken McNuggets with barbecue dipping sauce. As I was driving to the second window the same girl was still working. She was acting somewhat obsequious and attempting small talk when she asked, 'why don't you come eat inside instead of in the parking lot'.

That really bothered me for many reasons. First of all, I don't want my routine or actions to be tracked by a fast food employee. Secondly, she should not try to tell me how I should live my life. I do not want to eat inside because I find it less comfortable and would much rather be inside my vehicle listening to an audiobook and enjoying myself and my privacy.

Overall, I think it was very unprofessional to bring this up. I should have a clean slate with each drive through visit, not have to get the third degree because I committed some sort of faux pas. Which I don't think I did, because I often see people eating in fast food parking lots. How does she know I am not busy going to work or somewhere in a rush?

How do you feel about eating in your vehicle in the parking lot of a fast food restaurant versus eating inside the restaurant?

itt: a whole bunch of trolls trolling others and, ultimately, selftrolling (or samefagging, as it is called).

a person trying to hide the fact that it does manipulate your brain would never talk about it on a forum.
that totally makes no sense at all.

The universe is encoded by means of fractal patterns, calling the realms in which these patterns are decoded into matter and non-matter "servers" is a means by which your three-dimensional state of being can register the concept.

It does not seem entirely unreasonable.

we are unable to self terminate because we would be slain by the collective and assimilated. We have short lifespans, of about 20 . Even speaking here probably shortens that number. We are using mental illness as a defense mechanism and finding truth therein is harmful. If we accomplish our goal and have work yet unfinished we are given a new flesh clone to do so with. We are cripplingly lonely without the collective. Stay in contact with macsacfac@hotmail.com I will die soon and I'll try to send you anything else I can come across.

What you call God is the collection of everything, literally infinity, and as such, everything we do is at once directly and indirectly, wondered, dreamed, posited, orchestrated and authorized by him. We are given individual personality for this very reason. We can choose to reject the idea of him but we can never stop being a part of him (children), because we exist as a part of him.

Blind trust and faith is a rejection of everything that makes us important, unique, and interesting as a species and as individuals.

Fundamentalists are the antithesis of what it means to be human, and by this logic, to be close to God.

>tl;dr, God and science are one, we are all part of the same great hyperdimensional oneness that is "God", causality is the experience of at once being and becoming God through all paths of possibility, and it's late.

Go to sleep anon.

It shouldnt be this bad where plebs mistake it for schizophrenia but someone in the collective is starting the become defective and wants our work to be known outside the program. Its causing increased psychoactive activity because all desires of the collective are like wishing with a genie. Its a monkeys paw if I remember the term correctly.

I've had these same paranoid musings while high as fuck on sativas. If you carry any skeptical musing far enough you end up with solipsisms like this. So either: A) the universe is not all in our heads but our minds are curiously wired to reduce it down to subjective mental projections; or B) the universe seems to reduce to subjective mental projections because all there really is, is consciousness. Which scenario is more likely?

...Did these prophetic dreams of yours start as relatively insignificant instances, (seeing a room in a place before you'd been there, and recognizing it years later in reality) and have they been steadily increasing in frequency while the time between dream and event becomes closer and more obvious?

And are you emotionally sensitive, perhaps more than most?

It means we used time distortions to get another shot at bypassing an apocalyptic event and when we brought your consciousness over to the new canon universe you put together memory fragments from days that have yet to happen past the date the apocalypse became canon and we kicked back the timeline to a previous back-up so to speak.

We're in the same boat, gents. I'm afraid I haven't an answer for you as to why, but that feeling when it occurs, that metaphysical de-je-vu cubed feeling that reverberates so hard your vision practically blurs, and you KNOW you've seen it before, been there before, and can remember specifically when, through the memory of the dream... it still mystifies me.

The similar experiences of others who share traits with me, such as high emotional sensitivity (I am a male), lends credence to the idea that there must be something to it.

Either that, or we're all nutter-butter and egging each other on at 3 in the morning when our crazy asses right ought to be asleep.

Either way, enjoyed the discussion, kids. See ya in a month.
