My hair dryer changed color this morning

Like every other morning, I dried my hair with my white and black blow dryer. While I was downstairs, my daughter borrowed it to dry her hair. (It is our only working blow dryer in the house.)

Ten minutes later, my other daughter asked for help doing her hair. When I picked up the blow dryer, it was now purple and black!?! It still shows the same wear and tear (faded logo on the side). But it is a completely different color.

Did either of your daughters notice this difference?

One claims it was always purple. I have to ask the other.

I hope one of my girls agrees with me. I'm feeling a little crazy right now!

Could be one of those color changing ones that lets you know when it's cold enough. We're they refrigerated when you got them at the store?

Was it used in two different bathrooms? Maybe one bathroom has florescent or LED lighting? They can both make colors look different.

Nope. Good thought, but it was the same lighting, and the purple is a dark purple. Drastically different color.

How long have you had the hair dryer? Did you do a search of the hair dryer to see what color(s) it's sold in? That'd be so interesting if you found that it has only been sold in black & white.

The first thing I thought of was that dress! (Which I see as white and gold.)

Interesting that this can happen in reality too. You're both correct. Congratulations. Your perceptions are different but your perception burnbookcovergirl, changed. Something introduced change and now your brain sees a different color. This is no different to the color dress in the photo but maybe that brain resetting isn't just restricted to media. Unusual.

Do you have the receipt? Where did you buy it from? See if you can find a number of a website and see what color it says it is? Or does it come in both?...

To me your perception has changed. Your brain is decoding differently than normal. Interestingly enough, it doesn't mean they were right and you were wrong. Everyone saw what they saw. What triggered the change? Was any thought or suggestion made about the color?

Ps I'm sorry some are upset about 'the dress' but if you are smart you might actually try to learn something as opposed to being silly. The world would be a better place, if people grew up but if your perception is 'that bloody dress', then you miss a great opportunity. Thanks :)

I think the dress controversy is fascinating. I even wonder if it might have triggered a shift in my perception, like you suggest.

I don't have a receipt for the hair dryer. It's a couple of years old. I need to find a model number and see what colors it comes in. But, after using it today, I also feel like the shape and weight are off. Like it is a completely different model than I'm used to.
